

The American farmer has always been a rugged individualist, but recently has become more and more involved in governmental economic planning.

Photo by Harold M. Lambert Studios

The farmer is planting a crop on land more than 5000 feet high. Even here there are areas of level land.

Erving Gallonay

Sowing or Seeding

Four-Row
Seed Drill

Seed Drill

A Seed Drill plants seeds. It cuts furrows, drops seeds into them, and then covers them. The drill shown above plants eight rows at a time. As part of the operation, it also applies a herbicide that kills weeds and thus promotes the growth of the new crop.

Grant Heilman

